Proceeds benefit the Western Cooling Efficiency Center at the University of California Davis

The Western Cooling Efficiency Center is an authoritative and objective research center at UC Davis that accelerates the development and commercialization of efficient heating, cooling, and energy distribution solutions.

Our work is increasingly important as energy policies in the US and California recognize the far-reaching implications of greenhouse gas emissions on our environment and changing climate.

Applied Research

Working closely with manufacturers, policymakers and utilities, WCEC tests new and existing HVAC technologies in our laboratory. We also deploy real world demonstrations that provide objective technology evaluations of field performance. Our engineers recommend and implement performance improvements for the technologies tested.

Human Factors & Policy Research

We understand that even game changing technologies face considerable barriers to adoption that include policy, market and human interaction. WCEC works with policymakers, supporting codes and standards that will save energy and promote new, efficient technologies. We also work closely with our utility partners, to evaluate technologies for market incentives, and in parallel, address human behavioral factors.
